What is a Solicitor's Certificate?

Many times when borrowing funds from a bank, particularly when there is a guarantor involved, the lender will require a Solicitor's Certificate to be signed.

We regularly receive phone calls from clients who advise that they "just need this signed in front of a lawyer". This is mainly due to the information, or lack of information, received from the bank. The process, work involved and legal obligations have usually not been explained to the clients upon contacting our office. What the banks do not tell clients is that the solicitor is not just providing a signature, but rather a Solicitor's Certificate of Independent Legal Advice. This advice is to protect you – our client.

In signing this certificate, the solicitor has to state that (amongst other things) that they believe that the guarantor or borrower understood the general nature and effect of the documents that were signed.

As many of our clients have said, the advice on guarantee documents – or to obtain a solicitor's certificate is the best money they have ever spent!

Please give us a call on 9707 1155 if you need "the signature of a solicitor".

Mike Bennett - Director

Mike has been successfully advising business owners on accounting, financial and tax matters for more than 20 years.

Here at Quantum we work with our business clients to develop a detailed understanding of their processes and methods. From this vantage point, we can help them clarify their goals, build actions plans to reach those goals, and monitor and guide them through the implementation of those plans. Meet Quantum Financial Group's team of professional accountants and support staff - they are all here to help you achieve your business dreams.

We work with a range of clients, from individuals to sole traders, companies and SMSF, so we make sure that we speak your language when discussing your accounting, financial and tax matters.
