CONTESTING OR CHALLENGING A WILL BASED ON LACK OF MENTAL CAPACITY OR TESTAMENTARY CAPACITY

Challenging a Will on the basis that the testator did not have testamentary capacity at the time of executing their Will is especially common, if when the Will was executed, the testator was elderly, diagnosed with dementia (or showed signs of dementia) or was affected by any kind of medication or other substance misuse or illness.

New Anti-Money Laundering and Counter-Terrorism Financing Laws

What you need to know

New laws have been introduced by the Federal Government to help detect and disrupt money laundering and the funding of terrorism. These are the new anti-money laundering and counter-terrorism financing laws (AML/CTF). The changes are contained in the Anti-Money Laundering and Counter Terrorism Financing Act 2024 (C'th).

These laws oblige lawyers to obtain information from clients about their identity and source of wealth when acting for them. These obligations apply to all lawyers in Australia and they may impact how we handle your matter.

What we will need to know from you

We will need to ask you:

- ✓ To verify your identity
- ✓ To provide us with information about your source of wealth and of any funds that are used in the matter about which we are advising you
- ✓ Whether you are a politically exposed person (PEP) or family member of a PEP. A PEP is someone who holds a prominent public position such as in government, the courts or military.

We may also need to:

- ✓ Seek information about you from third party data suppliers – for example, obtain a company search and identification details of directors and shareholders where a company is involved.
- ✓ Obtain information about the ultimate beneficial owner or owners – such as any individual who controls a company, trust or partnership, where we are asked to act for the company, trust or partnership or where such company, trust, or partnership owns the corporate client.
- ✓ We will give you full details of the information you need to provide us during our onboarding process.

What happens to the information that you provide?

Any information provided to us for this purpose will only be used for that purpose. It will be kept by us in accordance with the AML/CTF laws, the Privacy Act 1988 (C'th) and other applicable laws.

We must keep any records we obtain for AML/CTF law purposes for seven years and also complete an annual report to the Australian Transaction Reports and Analysis Centre (AUSTRAC). The annual report includes details about how we have met our AML/CTF obligations.

You should be aware that the AML/CTF law requires us to report certain matters, such as any suspected money-laundering, to AUSTRAC and the law also prohibits us from informing you that we have done so.

All lawyers in Australia who provide services caught by the AML/CTF laws are under the same obligations.

Would I need to provide additional information?

You may need to provide further information. We are required by the AML/CTF law to monitor certain client transactions on an ongoing basis to ensure we have up-to-date information about our clients.

We will inform you if and when we would require further information.

Do I need to pay?

You will need to pay for the necessary due diligence required to be undertaken by us in accordance with the AML/CTF laws. For example, a fee may be payable:

- ✓ To any third party that we engage to undertake a verification of your identity.
- ✓ To obtain company searches of any corporate clients.

What happens if I cannot provide the information?

If we do not receive or are unable to verify the information we are required to obtain about you in order to comply with our AML/CTF obligations, we may be unable to act for you.

We may also have to cease acting for you if by continuing to act we breach our ethical obligations.

Would you like more information?

Please contact our office if you have any questions. All our lawyers and other relevant staff are provided with ongoing training on their AML/CTF law compliance obligations. We have appointed a compliance officer and senior manager to oversee our AML/CTF law programs and compliance.
